Serious acts of violence continue to plague our society. Recent history has shown it can happen at any place, at any time for many different reasons. While mass shootings get the most attention, they are only one form of active violence. Others include:

- Disgruntled employees, patients, or customers
- Non-violent demonstrations escalating into acts of violence.
- Domestic disputes carry over to the workplace, place of worship, etc.

What You Will Learn

The best result occurs when everyone gets to a safe place and out of harm's way. However, there may be a time when that is not possible, and action is required. Students learn using realistic circumstances how to recognize the signs of danger, make rapid decisions, and react appropriately.

Active violence emergency response training topics include:

- How to increase situational awareness
- Characteristics of an Active Violence Emergency
- Best practices when confronted with Active Violence
- Becoming an initial responder and rendering medical assistance
- How to safely interact with law enforcement
